ABOUT ROBBIE MAC IVER

Robbie Mac Iver, PMP, CSP, is Senior Partner and Agile Advisor for Corpus Optima. As an Agile Advisor, Robbie is incorporating agile principles into the organization's service offerings, delivery methods and internal operations to enhance the firm's ability to help its clients accelerate and sustain the advanced process and culture transformation practices of Superperformance. He focuses on raising the level of awareness of agile principles, practice and efficacy within the core leadership of client organizations and incorporation of agile principles and practices into client operations systems, product development processes, enterprise supply chains and customer processes in ways that amplify client time to market, adaptability, and product/service effectiveness.

Over several decades, Robbie has partnered with several major organizations including Sysco, Schlumberger, Landmark Graphics, Cap Gemini, Ernst & Young, and others in the development and implementation of innovative solutions to address complex business problems. By providing practical, sensible, and effective project leadership, Robbie guides teams and project communities to achieve visible, predictable results. His areas of expertise include project management, project planning, agile project leadership and coaching, agile practices and values, scrum, facilitation and communications, requirements discovery and management, rational unified process (RUP), use case analysis, iterative and incremental development (IID), and project risk management.

He is certified by the Scrum Alliance as a Certified Scrum Master and a Certified Scrum Professional, is a facilitator of Innovation Games® for Agile Teams, and holds the PMP certification from the Project Management Institute. After several decades of diverse project management practice he is conversant in the values and principles of agile practices as well as has a high level of appreciation for traditional project methods and philosophy. Coupled with his orientation to servant leadership he is well suited as an agile coach to help teams and enterprises make the transition from traditional to agile practices. Robbie has diversified experience in all phases of projects types from requirements discovery to completion, and has a proven track record of delivering successful projects through communicating, coordinating, and integrating all aspects of the project. He has also successfully implemented agile practices outside of the software development domain using Scrum to manage complex business processes. Robbie is president of the Agile Leadership Network, dedicated to the next generation of enterprise agility and leadership.
